‘They need that connection’

Kinship carers and support staff speak about contact between children and their families

A new Australian research report on kinship care is now available. Report 4 in the research series Family Links: Kinship Care and Family Contact presents feedback from a large survey of Victorian kinship carers, and focus groups with kinship carers and support workers. The research was undertaken by the University of Melbourne and supported by the Office of the Child Safety Commissioner.

Copies are free and are available from the Office of the Child Safety Commissioner 8601 5884 or www.kids.vic.gov.au or from Meredith Kiraly mkiraly@unimelb.edu.au

Reports 1, 2 and 3 are also still available at www.kids.vic.gov.au
